

STANDARD 4

Screening, supervision, training and other human resources practices that reduce the risk of child abuse

Rationale

- Carefully developed policies and procedures not only help to identify the most suitable persons to work with children in the school, they can also deter unsuitable persons from applying or being appointed, either in a paid or voluntary capacity.
- Selecting suitable and appropriate people to work with children is vital. Everyone benefits when the best people, who also share the school's values about keeping children safe from harm, are chosen. If good care is taken during the recruitment phase, it is more likely that people who are unsuitable to work with children will be screened out. Good recruitment practices help to reduce the opportunities for harm to occur by deterring the 'wrong' people from applying.
- The school needs to be clear about the role and responsibilities of each position, particularly when they involve working closely with children.
- A job description or duty statement should include a clear outline of the role and also state the expectation that staff must provide a child safe environment. It should clearly spell out:
 - the organisational context
 - duties and tasks of the role
 - qualifications, experience and attributes a person must have
 - the level of responsibility and supervision associated with the positions
- A well-developed job description is more likely to attract suitably qualified staff and volunteers. When roles and responsibilities are unclear, unsuitable people are more likely to apply because the organisation may not look as professional and capable of identifying unsuitable applicants.
